do not marvel that they turn from it in sorrow and disgust. They would be less than patriots and less than men if they did less. It is not the mass of the Union. It does not announce the enterprising to which they were invited.
So much for radicalism in Tennessee.

Radicalism in Maryland and in Missouri and indeed everywhere else breathes the same revolutionary spirit and clamors for the same revolutionary policy. The opening sentence of this article is undeniably true. It is illustrated anew by every new development of the time. Radicalism is revolutionism; conservatism is constitutionalism.

An official correspondence between Brig. Gen. S. A. Meredith and N. Ould, the commissioners to regulate the exchange of prisoners, has been published relative to the treatment of John Morgan. Among the letters is one from Lieut. Col. Alston, who was attached to Morgan's staff and has been exchanged. He writes to the rebel Secretary of War and prefers charges against Lieut. Col.
Hanson and the 20th Kentucky which are false and malicious. He says the force which surrounded at Lebanon on the 5th of July consisted of five hundred men and a section of artillery with about forty men, when he knows that the minister rolled delivered to him called for but three hundred and eighty, rank and file, though there were some twelve or fifteen unattached persons who assisted in the defense of the town and shared the fate of the captured. As to the section of artillery, Alston's imagination is very vivid. There was a twelve-pounder which Neville had brought down to practise his men, but they had neither ammunition, ammunition nor fuse. The only time it was fired was on the previous day, the Fourth of July, when the boys gave a salute, and used a chunk of wood for fire. Col. Alston says Col. Hanson requested Morgan to parole him and his men. This is untrue, and deliberately so. The paroling was done hurriedly, for Col. Hanson did not at the time know how Morgan was pressed, but he made no pledge of his personal honor to respect his parole or to report to Morgan at some point within the Confederate lines. We have always believed that Morgan paroled Col. Hanson and his men to prevent their massacre.
Morgan himself had very kind consideration to them, but his brother Cal was inflamed at the death of another brother on the field and treated Col. Hanson with brutality, for which, however, after an interview with John, he attempted an apology, and under the circumstances we have always been inclined to accept his excuses. At times a score of pistols held by maddened savages were pointed at Col. Hanson, and Morgan sent him under guard to another part of the town under pretence that his men, ignorant of the capitulation, were still fighting.
Morgan paroled the Twentieth Kentucky because he did not know what to do with the prisoners; they incumbered his retreat and he had no force to spare as a guard to send them to the Confederate lines. The legality of the parole had never been believed by anybody, for it was directly in violation of the carpel. The opinion of Gen. Burnside was clear on this subject, but in order to prevent difficulties he assigned the 20th Kentucky to protest duty in this city instead of taking it with him to East Tennessee, so that Col. Hanson was anxious to go. The paroled rebels at Vicksburg were immediately put into the service again, and Gen. Rosecrans had probably a thousand of them received by the army of the Cumberland. No severe measures were ever taken against them.
Alston states that after the parole of Hanson's command on July 5th, a portion of it, on the 8th, captured Captain Campbell and a small detachment of rebels and took them to Nicholasville, where they were abused as a party of horse thieves and scoundrels, and robbed of their boots and hats, which were thrown away in their presence. All this is intentionally false, for Alston made no mention of it in his diary, which was afterwards captured and published. Some of our boys did take hats and shoes from the rebel prisoners at Nicholasville, but they were the very articles that had been stolen from them and their companions after the capitulation.
Strange position, indeed, for rational and sincere friends of emancipation! At this time all negroes and negroes, and men, women, and children, and even children under the influence of moral suasion or most convincing logic of statesmanship.

Strange to say, many who profess to respect the cause of slavery, and pronounce it an evil, advocate its restoration. They say that when slavery shall have been secured again to its owners, it will be a great blessing. Tennessee is a safe force, the time will then be in favor of discussing the propriety of emancipation. The slaves are quite inexplicable, but we are to determine whether they have ceased to be profitable to any slaveholder in those States, and have only a nominal existence before their legislative and executive power. Individual slaves are to be freed, and negroes are to be given the right to buy and sell, and crosses under the influence of moral suasion or most convincing logic of statesmanship.

This is certainly the most natural conclusion in the world; yet the article is very far from admitting any such conclusion. On the contrary, it repels every conclusion of the sort in a manner which is hardly less remarkable for its boldness than for its disclosure.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 3 A.M.

A meeting of the ladies friendly to the building of a fair for the benefit of the poor will be held in the drawing room of the Masonic building at 10 o'clock Saturday morning. A general attendance is desired.

Gentlemen who will assist in procuring the poor are especially invited to meet at the dining-room Masonic building, Saturday afternoon.

GENERAL STEURON.—This gallant accomplished officer is now in our city, and rejoice to learn that he is in excellent health. The army does not contain a better man, a truer patriot, or a nobler man. Sturgis is an ornament to the service. He has lost his dear half his heart, he is a Major-General, with the command of an army.

The Board of Trade will hold an ad- meeting at their usual place of con- ference this evening, and the important sub- ject to be considered reader is advised to pay a full attendance.

Fair for the Poor.—The call for a meet- ing of ladies at 10 o'clock to-morrow morn- ing in the drawing room of the Masonic temple, to complete arrangements for holding a Fair for the benefit of our poor will, we hope, be largely attended. The Springfield (Mass.) repository says with great truth that while this national struggle has developed the noblest characteristics of manhood, it had no more, for it has developed the highest and purest motives of womanhood. The patriotic matrons will be proud to have their names and deeds coupled with those of the American mothers, wives, and sisters who have cheerfully placed their dearest treasures upon the altar of their country. Florence Crittenden, whose conduct at the Crimes of the living witness to the singular purity of her motives, will not hesitate to share the historic page that we so gladly record, with the scores and hundreds of our brave women who so kindly and ten- derly ministered to our sick and wounded soldiers. But for this war, we should always have pointed to Sparta for feminine heroism and to England for woman's philanthropy, not dreaming that same elements of strength and daring were here, and that American women were waiting only for the baptism of suffering to appear as earnest workers and unflinching patriots. We are thankful for these new and rich developments. We are prouder than ever of our nationality. We rejoice that our mothers and our sisters have done so much to enable our country to ex- alt our race. Nor have these efforts been spasmodic and unbroken, but persistent and regular. Even now demand for effort and for sacrifice has been generously and nobly met, and however long the war may last, there is no occasion to fear that we shall exhaust the patriotism of our ladies. Defeat and disaster only make them stronger, and the more claims there are upon their benevolence, the more do they arise to an appreciation of their duties. So long as loyal men are suffer- ing from disease and wounds, so long will loyal women delight in bestowing upon them their care and attention; so long as the Sanitary Commission continues to so wisely extend the donations received, so long will the women aid it by individual and united effort.

Our ladies now propose another field for charitable work, and this is to supply the wants of our city poor during the coming winter. And we hold up to them and to our citizens the noble example of the ladies of Chicago, and indeed of the whole Northwest, who, for months past, were making preparations for a mammoth fair for the assistance of the Sanitary Commission. They went into the market with great earnestness, solicited articles of merchandise and contributions of money from individuals, towns, and cities, and their efforts were everywhere met with the most generous response. No fair assembled for a charitable purpose ever presented so great a variety of articles for sale, or furnished such an extensive programme of enterainment. They received donations of land, horses, cattle, carriages, pianos, sewing machines, and every sort and species of product and manufacture that the earth can produce or the mind of man invent. The fair commenced on Tuesday, the 27th ult., with a grand procession three miles in length, consisting of a vast number of military and civic companies and associations, and the appearance was very imposing. Tableaux, concerts, promenade concerts, lectures, &c., were to occupy the different evenings, and the German ladies will close the two weeks' entertainment by a grand ball-to-mor- row night. Cannot Louisville and Kan- tucky emulate the generosity of the North- western ladies and gentlemen and get up such a fair as will be remembered in after years? Let us try and see what we can accomplish, and in earnest of our determination to succeed let there be a full meeting to-mor- row.

CITY ITEMS.—The weather continues pleasant, with a golden sunset last night, which indicates more warm days.

The city is unusually dull in all matters of interest to our local readers.

All is quiet in military and police circles. No arrests.

Ninety prisoners were sent to Camp Morton yesterday, and some dozen rebels to Johnson's Island.

Business in all branches is apparently brisk, particularly in dry goods.

Amusements of all kinds are well attended. The Ladies' Fair for the benefit of the poor, closed last evening, having proved entirely successful.

The health of the city is good. Though the season that generally usher in colds and colds is upon us, it has been very considerate thus far in the distribution of its gifts.

The coal prospect is discussed generally, and forms a topic of conversation second only to the war news in interest. The river intelligence from above is sought with an eagerness almost, if not quite, equal to the details of battle.

A horse was recovered yesterday by the military authorities, belonging to Uncle Sam, from a man in the upper part of the city, who bought the animal from a stranger.

There are very few military officers in the city outside of those stationed here, and the small number, we observe, are with us to recover their health.

The streets of the city are alive with Government teams every day, hauling between the Jeffersonville and Nashville railroad depots.

The applications for passes over the Nashville Railroad are very numerous, but they are granted to none but those who reside along the line of the road, or at Nashville.

Our branch railroads running through the city are in operation, and work charitably.

There is quite a demand for mechanical labor of almost every description at the present time.

We pleased to observe a number of important improvements going on in different parts of the city.

The magnificent banking-house of the Hamilton Brothers, on the corner of Main and Sixth streets, is being rapidly completed. It will compare favorably in point of architectural beauty with any building of similar dimensions in the country. We require a few more such edifices on Main street, and trust our enterprising merchants will meet the demand at no distant day.

The alleys around the falls of the Ohio are doing a very extensive business, and so far as we can learn, are excellently managed.

No steps have been taken as yet by our city authorities to supply the demand for coal. We hope some arrangements will soon be made.

Mrs. Stoeby's little boy was accidentally shot by a playfellow yesterday, while gunning at the pond, and his elbow joint suddenly shattered that amputation was necessary, and the operation was performed by Drs. Griffiths and Hardin.

THEATRE.—We understand that Mr. and Mrs. Webb, two of the principal performers lately attached to the Laura Keene combination, have arrived in this city on their way East, and consented to appear in the great drama of Our American Cousin, and other entertainments on Saturday night next for the benefit of Eddy Bauer.

THEATRE.—Messrs. Spratt & Co. sold yesterday a crop of seven bushels, grown by T. C. Rees, of Todd county, at an average of $21 per 100 pounds.

A Fair for the benefit of the poor is called in New Albany. We have no doubt that the noble example set by our ladies will be emulated by many of our sister cities.
